What is Intelence Tablet (Etravirine)?

Intelence Tablet (Etravirine) is a drug that is used in combination with other drugs in the treatment of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infections in adults and children aged 2 and up who are no longer responding to existing HIV treatments. Etravirine belongs to a group of drugs known as non-nucleoside reverse transcriptase inhibitors (NNRTIs). It works by lowering HIV levels in the bloodstream. However etravirine does not eliminate HIV, it can reduce your risk of acquiring AIDS and HIV-related disorders such as severe symptoms or cancer. These drugs, together with safer sex practices and other lifestyle modifications, may reduce the risk of transferring the HIV virus to others.

Intelence Tablet (Etravirine) - How To Use

- Get this medicine by mouth, generally twice daily, after a meal, as instructed by your doctor. Completely swallow the medicine. The tablets should not be crushed, chewed, or divided.
- The dosage for children is determined by their weight.

- If you have problems swallowing this medicine whole, dissolve it in a glass with about 1 tablespoon of water. Add extra water if necessary to completely cover the tablet. Mix the contents thoroughly until it resembles milk. To melt the tablet, use only water. Then fill the glass with roughly 1 tablespoon (15 millilitres) of water, orange juice, or milk and consume it all immediately. Drink all of it after rinsing the glass with extra water, orange juice, or milk.
- It is essential that you continue to take this completely as your doctor prescribes. Do not use this medicine in larger doses or more frequently than recommended. Your situation will not recover any faster, and you may experience more severe side effects.
- If your doctor tells you to, do not use less of this drug than advised or stop accepting it (or other HIV drugs) even for a short period. This may increase the amount of virus present and/or make treating the illness more difficult (resistant).
- Take this drug at regular intervals for the best results. Use this prescription for the same period of time every day to help you remember.
