Permethrin belongs to the scabicides and pediculicides class of drugs. It works by removing lice and mites from the body.

How to Use Permethrin

- Permethrin is applied to the skin as a lotion or cream. Permethrin is available over-the-counter as a lotion to treat the scalp and hair.
- Permethrin lotion should be applied to the skin, hair, and scalp only. It should not be gotten into your eyes, nose, ears, mouth, or vaginal area. Permethrin should not be used on your brows or eyelashes.
- If permethrin gets into your eyes, immediately flush them with water. If your eyes are still sensitive after washing with water, get medical attention immediately.

Procedures to Apply The Lotion

- Before using permethrin lotion, give it a good shake to ensure that the drug is well distributed.
- Cover your eyes and face with a cloth. Make sure you close your eyes during this therapy. It's possible that you'll need the assistance of an adult to apply the lotion.
- Permethrin lotion should be applied to your hair and scalp. Begin by applying the lotion near your ears and down the back of your neck, then cover your entire head and scalp with it.
- After you've finished applying permethrin, let it on your hair and scalp for at least ten minutes. To keep track of time, use a timer or a clock.
- In a sink, wash your scalp and hair with warm water. Because you don't want the lotion to get all over your body, you shouldn't rinse it away in the shower or bathtub.
- Using a towel, dry your hair and comb out any tangles.
- After applying and rinsing the lotion, you and anyone who assisted you should wash your hands.
- After this treatment, a lice comb can be used to remove dead lice and nits (shell of the empty egg). You may need to enlist the assistance of an adult to complete this task.
- Repeat this technique if you notice live lice on your scalp for seven days or more following treatment.

After using permethrin, sanitize all of your recently used clothing, undergarments, pyjamas, hats, sheets, pillowcases, and towels. These goods should be dry-cleaned or cleaned in very hot water. Combs, brushes, hair clips, and other personal care products should also be washed in hot water.
